

Shrimp are relatives of lobsters. Snapping shrimp have one oversized claw. It makes a loud popping noise if snapped shut. When large numbers of these shrimp are alarmed, their united claw snapping makes a frying or sizzling sound under water. Snapping shrimp often find protection from enemies by living in live sponges.